“Extraordinary events—positive or negative—are temporary openings for breakthroughs in personal growth, development, and human progress. Breakthrough leaders seize these moments to explore a world of new possibilities for themselves... for society.”

Professor Wayne Baker, Stephen M. Ross School of Management, University of Michigan

Welcome to the 37th Annual H. Naylor Fitzhugh Conference! Named for Harvard Business School’s first African-American graduate, the conference is an enduring memorial to a distinguished servant of the School. As a pioneering marketer at the Pepsi-Cola Company and an activist in Washington DC’s Black business community, Fitzhugh embodies this year’s conference theme, “Breakthrough Leadership.” During what would have been Fitzhugh’s 100th year, we have witnessed the historic election of President Barack Obama and are in the midst of a serious economic crisis; therefore, we believe breakthrough leadership is more important than ever.

Each year the conference has grown to attract over 300 guests. Attendees include students from the Boston and Harvard communities, professionals, alumni, and countless others. The conference aims to bring together individuals at all stages of their leadership journey to connect with each other and to engage in education, thought-provoking discussion, networking, and personal and professional development.

The 2009 Conference Leadership Team has worked hard to capture a wide variety of topics relevant to our attendees. We hope the perspectives that our presenters and attendees bring this weekend will help illuminate the challenges and opportunities that our community faces today.

On behalf of the H. Naylor Fitzhugh Conference, we would like to thank the conference leadership team, the African-American Student Union, HBS staff and faculty, speakers and panelists, alumni, our sponsors, and all conference attendees for their support in making this event one to remember. We invite you to participate fully in the weekend’s events, and it is our sincerest hope that you leave us engaged, inspired, and ready to take the lead in these critical times.

Sincerely,

Lionel Lynch, Arianne Graham, Kedra Newsom
The 2009 H. Naylor Fitzhugh Conference Co-Chairs
Greetings to Our Extended Family,

On behalf of the members of the Harvard Business School’s African American Student Union (AASU) family, we welcome you to the 37th Annual H. Naylor Fitzugh Conference. We are excited to have this opportunity to fellowship with you as we embark on this unprecedented era of change for our community and our world.

As each of us plays our role in navigating this community’s ship through today’s rough and unpredictable political and economic waters, it is important that our focus be two-fold. First, we must continue to strengthen the foundation that the leaders who came before us toiled and sacrificed to build, while simultaneously leveraging their wisdom to avoid setbacks. Second, and more relevant to this conference’s theme of “Breakthrough Leadership,” it is imperative that we exhaust our capacity to embrace and encourage our community’s new line of leaders. One thing is certain in this new era of Obama: our values, beliefs, actions and progress will be scrutinized, questioned and tested now, more than ever.

We believe that this year’s conference will offer you invaluable opportunities to learn from and celebrate our past, identify and embrace our present and tackle the tough questions around how we will prepare our community for sustainable future success. We anticipate that each of you will find this year’s program offerings to be robust, thought-provoking and inspirational.

Further, we believe the 37th Annual H. Naylor Fitzugh Conference benefits the wide cross-section of individuals that are in attendance. Alumni - welcome home and we hope you will enjoy seeing your classmates. Recently admitted students – congratulations on your acceptance! We look forward to meeting you throughout the conference. Prospective students – we hope you take this opportunity to meet alumni, faculty and current students of the Harvard MBA Program. Current students – your hard work paid off! Please take the time to enjoy the events you have planned and gain knowledge from the panels and workshops you have organized. Friends of AASU – we are glad you are connecting (or reconnecting) with the AASU community.

Once again, we would like to thank you for your attendance and we are excited to spend this weekend engaging in fellowship with you. We truly hope you enjoy this memorable weekend!

Dear Friends,

I am delighted to welcome you to the 37th Annual H. Naylor Fitzhugh Conference sponsored by the African American Student Union (AASU) at Harvard Business School. This year's theme - Breakthrough Leadership - reflects both the challenges and the opportunities facing business in the years ahead. At a watershed moment in our nation's history and in the world economy, the need for leadership has never been greater, nor has the possibility for positive impact.

Each year, the AASU conference brings together many hundreds of students, prospective students, alumni, and African American business and community leaders for an enriching program of intellectual engagement, networking, and personal development. This year's conference chairs, Lionel Lynch, Kedra Newsom, and Arianne Graham, and the entire student organizing panel have worked tirelessly over the past few months to put together a truly outstanding program of panels, workshops, keynote speeches, and activities I know you will find engaging. From the opening Town Hall to the fireside chats to the gospel brunch, I am confident you will have a wonderful time. Enjoy!

Best regards,

BREAKTHROUGH LEADERSHIP

Town Hall Meeting Keynote Speaker Alumni Awards
TOWN HALL: AFTER THE WHITE HOUSE, WHAT'S NEXT? THE NEW BLACK LEADERSHIP AGENDA
Friday March 6, 7:00–8:30pm, Governor's Room

With President Obama in the White House, the United States, the Black community, and people the world over are operating under a new context - an United States of America with an African American President. What does this mean for the Black community? What does this mean for Black leaders in the public and private sector? How do we take part in the new Black leadership agenda?

Panel Coordinators: Damali Brown (MBA 2010), Lionel Lynch (MBA 2010) & Kedra Newson (MBA 2009)

MODERATOR

Professor David Thomas
Professor, Harvard Business School

David Thomas is H. Naylor Fitzvugh Professor of Business Administration at Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. He joined the HBS faculty in 1990 and became a tenured professor in 1998.

David Thomas is a recognized thought leader in the area of strategic human resource management. His research addresses issues related to executive development, cultural diversity in organizations, leadership and organizational change. His research has appeared in leading academic journals and practitioner oriented periodicals. He is the 1998 recipient of the Executive Development Roundtable's Marion Gislason Award for Contributions to Executive Development Theory and Practice.

He is co-author of the Best Selling Harvard Business Review article “Making Differences Matter: A New Paradigm for Managing Diversity.” His book Breaking Through: The Making of Minority Executives in Corporate America (with John Gabarro) has met with critical acclaim in reviews by academics and journalists, and is the recipient of the Academy of Management's George R. Terry Book Award for outstanding contribution to the advancement of management knowledge. It explores the career advancement and development of minority executives in large multinational corporations.

Professor Thomas served as Course Head for the Harvard Business School’s required first-year MBA course, Leadership and Organizational Behavior. He was the faculty chair for the HBS Executive Education program, Strategic Human Resource Management, and teaches in the Public Education Leadership Program. For seven years, he taught and developed materials for the popular second-year elective course, Self-Assessment and Career Development. He is a frequent presenter in executive education programs as well as a consultant to private sector corporations, government agencies and not-for-profit organizations.

Professor Thomas received his Bachelor of Arts (1978), Master of Philosophy (1984) and Doctor of Philosophy (1986) degrees from Yale University. He also holds a Master of Arts (1981) in Organizational Psychology from Columbia University.

Prior to joining the faculty of the Harvard Business School, he was on the faculty of the Wharton School of Finance. Professor Thomas sits on the boards of several organizations, among them Cambridge Trust Company, Brigham and Women’s Hospital and the Posse Foundation.
PANELISTS

Charles G. Adams
Professor, Harvard Divinity School

Charles G. Adams, one of the most prominent ministers in the United States, joined the Faculty of Divinity as the first Nickerson Professor of the Practice of Ethics and Ministry in July 2007, starting a five-year term. Adams, an acclaimed preacher and expert on ministry and urban revitalization, had previously been senior pastor of Hartford Memorial Baptist Church in Detroit since 1969. Under his leadership, the church was nationally noted for establishing social, educational, and recreational programs for a congregation numbering at more than 10,000 members, as well as broader economic development initiatives that have helped revitalize much of northwest Detroit. He has been president of the Detroit branch of the NAACP and holds memberships on numerous boards across the United States, including those of the National Council of Churches and Morehouse College. In a more global arena, he has been integral to the World Council of Churches' efforts to combat racism around the world, and in this regard addressed the United Nations on South African apartheid. In 1994, he accompanied President Bill Clinton to Jordan to witness the signing of the peace accord between Jordan and Israel. He has honorary doctorates from many American institutions, including Morehouse, Dillard University, and Tuskegee University, and has received many awards, including the Katzenstein and Black Alumni/ae awards at HDS, where he has also been a central teacher for the Summer Leadership Institute for faith-based community and economic development.

Prior to Young & Rubicam Brands, Ms. Fudge served as President, Beverages, Desserts and Post Division – a $5 billion unit of Kraft Foods. She served on Kraft's Management Committee and has managed many businesses including Maxwell House Coffee, Gevalia Kaffe, Kool Aid, Crystal Light, Post cereals, Jell-O desserts and Aloids. Before joining General Foods, she spent nine years at General Mills, where she began as a Marketing Assistant and rose to the level of Marketing Director.

She serves on the Board of Directors of General Electric and Novartis. She is on the Harvard Board of Overseers, the Board of Morehouse College, and is a trustee of the Brookings Institution. Ms. Fudge also serves on the Boards of the Rockefeller Foundation, the Council on Foreign Relations, and is Chair of the U.S. Program Advisory Panel for the Gates Foundation. She was a recipient of the NY Executive Council's Ten Awards, given for leadership and innovation in business and was named one of Time Magazine's Global Business Influentials.

Ms. Fudge has received the Matrix Award for Advertising from New York Women in Communication. Among her other honors are Leadership Awards from the Minneapolis and New York City YWCA, an Alumni Achievement Award from Harvard Business School, a Lifetime Achievement Award from Ebony magazine, and a Legacy Award in Business from Black Enterprise magazine. She has been profiled in Black Enterprise, Business Week and The New York Times, among others and named by Fortune magazine as one of the 50 most powerful women in American business.
David Rawlinson
White House Fellow

David Rawlinson is currently serving as a White House Fellow. In this nonpartisan appointment, he works with the White House Chief of Staff and other senior Administration officials. Before the election, he helped to lead the outgoing transition effort, including the establishment and operation of the Presidential Transition Coordinating Council. In the Obama Administration he has continued to work within the Chief of Staff’s Office. He also serves as the Special Advisor to the Director of the White House National Economic Council.

Before the Fellowship, David attended Harvard Business School. While attending Harvard, he served as the Editor-in-Chief of The Harbus, and as the class commencement speaker. Prior to enrolling in business school, David practiced with the law firms of Locke Lord Bissell & Liddell, and with K&L Gates. His practice included representing Fortune 500 companies before domestic and international agencies and courts. He frequently presents on subjects related to his legal expertise, including submitting testimony to the U.S. Congress.

David received a J.D. from the University of South Carolina. He received his B.A. in Political Science from The Citadel. David was appointed in 1997 to the White House Conference on Youth, Drugs and Violence. He also served on the Dallas Tax Increment Finance Board, graduated from Leadership Dallas, and is a Truman Scholar. He has also served on numerous non-profit boards of directors, including the board of Bryan’s House, a pediatric HIV/AIDS organization.

John Rogers
Founder, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Ariel Investments and Co-Chair Presidential Inaugural Committee

John W. Rogers, Jr. is founder, chairman and chief executive officer of Ariel Investments, a Chicago-based money management firm that serves individual investors and 401(k) plans through its no-load mutual funds and manages separate accounts for institutional clients. In 1983, at the age of 24, John founded the firm with an investment philosophy grounded in patient, discipline and independent thinking. Twenty-five years later, his original philosophy still guides Ariel Investments today. John is the lead portfolio manager of the firm’s flagship Ariel Fund as well as its mid-cap counterpart Ariel Appreciation Fund. Additionally, as the firm’s chief investment officer, he manages Ariel’s small, small-mid and mid-cap institutional portfolios.

John serves as a corporate board member of three public companies: Aon Corporation, Exelon Corporation and McDonald’s Corporation. Also dedicated to giving back to the community, his civic affiliations include serving as a director of the Chicago Urban League, a trustee of the University of Chicago as well as a member of the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation. In addition, he is a past president of the Board of the Chicago Park District. John received an AB in economics in 1980 from Princeton University where he was also captain of the Varsity Basketball Team. In 2008, John was awarded Princeton’s highest honor, the Woodrow Wilson Award, bestowed annually on a graduate whose career embodies a commitment to national service.

His investment expertise has brought him to the forefront of media attention. He is a regular columnist in Forbes magazine and is frequently quoted in various news and business publications including USA TODAY, The New York Times, Black Enterprise, BusinessWeek and SmartMoney. In addition, he has made guest appearances on television shows ranging from CNBC to Fox News and has also spoken at many academic institutions.
Luncheon Keynote Speaker:

Renée Lewis Glover
Chief Executive Officer, Atlanta Housing Authority

Renée Lewis Glover joined the Atlanta Housing Authority (AHA) as CEO in September 1994. Since that time, she has been widely acknowledged for her business leadership and strategic approach to community redevelopment. At AHA, Glover pioneered master-planned, mixed-finance, mixed-income residential development where families of all socio-economic profiles live next to each other in the same amenity-rich community.

Glover has been nationally recognized for her role in transforming U.S. urban policy. By introducing mixed-income communities into our cities, she has improved not only housing, but also public schools, transit access and employment opportunities. In fact, the model Glover created at AHA is now used as the redevelopment blueprint by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Renée Lewis Glover has received numerous recognitions over the years. Glover is being honored with the Turner Broadcasting Downtown Community Service Award in March 2007. On December 17, 2005, the “Masked” Award was presented to Ms. Glover by the United Negro College Fund, Inc. and the African Heritage Foundation, in appreciation for her support of UNCF and the 22nd Anniversary Mayor’s Masked Ball. In July 2003, Renée Glover was chosen by the Atlanta History Center as one of Atlanta’s Defining Women. She was named Public Official of the Year 2002 by Governing Magazine. In June 2002, a collaboration among the Center for American Women and Politics, the Ford Foundation and the Council for Excellence in Government recognized Glover as one of the top ten American women in government. Glover has also been featured in Atlanta Women Speak, an anthology of speeches from Atlanta’s political and corporate leadership. She was also honored with the Dan Sweat Community Leadership Award from the Urban Land Institute in 1998.

Prior to joining the Atlanta Housing Authority, Glover was a corporate finance attorney in Atlanta and New York City. She received her Juris Doctorate from Boston University, her Master’s degree from Yale University and her Bachelor of Arts from Fisk University.

Mr. Primo and his family reside in the Chicago area.
THE PROFESSIONAL ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

Edward Lewis (OPM 1982)
Founder and Chairman, Essence Communications, Inc.

Edward Lewis, Founder and Chairman of Essence magazine, is one of America’s foremost African American entrepreneurs, community leaders, political activists, and philanthropists. Over the past three decades, Lewis has established Essence as the number one brand for black women and built a multi-media empire spanning magazines, TV, the web, festivals, conferences and retail catalogues to expand its inspirational message of empowerment.

Born in New York’s South Bronx, Lewis the son of a janitor and a beautician and factory worker, graduated from DeWitt Clinton High school in 1958. Armed with a football scholarship, he went to the University of New Mexico where he received his B.A. in political science in 1963 and an M.A. in political science and international relations in 1967. Understanding the importance of education, Lewis spent a year at Georgetown Law School in ’65 and in the late 60’s nearly completed his Doctorate in Public Administration at NYU at night while he worked by day as a credit analyst at Citibank. In 1982, he completed Harvard Business School’s Small Business Management Program.

On November 8, 1968 in the wake of the Civil Rights movement, Lewis attended a meeting with other young businessmen to discuss ways to provide more economic opportunity for African Americans. On that fateful day, the idea was born for a black women’s magazine, inspired in part by the undervalued work and invisible achievements of women like Lewis’ mother and aunts, his “sheroes”. Lewis realized that there was no magazine where black women’s images and voices could be seen and heard to encourage and educate a whole new generation of women who were marginalized and underserved. With $13,000 in start up capital and a dream, Lewis abandoned his doctoral thesis and promising career as a banker to start Essence magazine.

John Whitehead, Chairman, Lower Manhattan Development Corp., one of his mentors and early investors states, “When I met Ed Lewis and heard about his vision for a magazine dedicated to black women over 30 years ago, I immediately believed in the brilliance of the idea and in him. Its enormous success today makes me proud to have been one of his early supporters.”

For over 35 years, Lewis, as CEO and Publisher, nurtured Essence into a media powerhouse and the pre-eminent brand for a national sisterhood of black women 7 million strong. He also radically changed Madison Avenue’s perception of black women and awakened corporate America to their achievements and massive purchasing power in the multi-billions of dollars. Lewis and one of his publishing colleagues, John Johnson, were relentless in championing the moral imperative and business sense in taking this powerful consumer seriously. Lewis’s efforts influenced companies like Estee Lauder, L’Oreal, P&G, GM, Kraft, Ford and Bank of America to place black women front and center in their advertising.

WASHINGTON D.C. COLLEGE TRIP: To supplement Boston Public Schools (BPS) students’ exposure to local colleges in the New England area and to complement the work the African American Student Union (AASU) has done with 8th graders through the Citizen Schools program, we are in search of funding to create at least ten scholarships for our students to participate in a trip to an Historically Black College and University (HBCU) in Washington D.C. The cost per student is $850. The selection process will be competitive and the trip will take place from Saturday, April 18th to Monday, April 20th during Boston Public Schools’ Spring Break. The trip will be chaperoned by Citizen Schools staff and AASU volunteers, and it will include a full-day at Howard University and a full-day touring Washington D.C.

AASU COMMUNITY SERVICE: Each Saturday the Harvard Business School (HBS) African American Student Union travels to the Roxbury neighborhood of Boston and partners with Citizen Schools to teach an apprenticeship on branding to fifteen Black and Latino 8th grade students from Boston Public Schools. Utilizing HBS cases, interactive projects, and one-on-one mentoring, AASU seeks to connect the personal brands of these urban youth to careers and college. 31 AASU members volunteered at least once over 10 weeks during the Fall of 2008. See below for a description of our curriculum.

CITIZEN SCHOOLS 8th GRADE ACADEMY: AASU has partnered with Citizen Schools, a national nonprofit provider of after-school education programs. The Citizen Schools 8th Grade Academy helps approximately 100 Boston Public Schools students transition from middle school to high school, college and beyond through “apprenticeships” taught by local volunteers, after-school academic help, and enrichment activities like trips to local colleges.

DESIRED IMPACT: AASU’s community service goal is to grow the pipeline of minority youth in the Boston area who possess both the qualifications and the desire to join the future Harvard Business School Class of 2025. We are focused on addressing two major hurdles to achieving this goal:

- High School Graduation: Over 35% of Black 8th graders entering BPS high schools will eventually drop out of high school.
- College Attainment: Over 90% of Black 8th graders entering BPS high schools will fail to attain a 2-year or 4-year college degree.

APPRENTICESHIP CURRICULUM:

Week 1 – HBS Mountain Dew Case
Week 2 – HBS Truth Campaign Case
Week 3 – Marketing Exercise
Week 4 – Social Clique Branding
Week 5 – Celebrity Brands
Week 6 – Career Assessments
Week 7 – Brand You: Life Stories
Week 8 – Brand You: Personal Brand
Week 9 – Brand You: Personal Brand

Tsedal Beyene
Assistant Professor, Harvard Business School

Tsedal Beyene is an Assistant Professor in the Organizational Behavior area at Harvard Business School. She currently teaches the first-year Leadership and Organizational Behavior (LEAD) course in the MBA program.

Professor Beyene’s research focuses on the challenges that international collaborators face when attempting to coordinate work across national and linguistic boundaries, with special emphasis in the impact of language on social dynamics. In particular, she examines the effects of internationalizing firms’ policies requiring employees of diverse skill-set to adopt English as their common business language, or lingua franca. In addition to lingua franca adoption behaviors, she studies the influence of cross-cultural intelligence in heterogeneous work environments.

Before her academic career, Professor Beyene spent ten years in industry working for companies like Lucent Technologies and The Forum Corporation in various capacities including strategies for global customer experience, 360 degree performance software management systems, sales force/sales management development, and business flow analysis for telecommunication infrastructures. With extensive international experience, Professor Beyene is fluent in four languages.

Erika James
Associate Professor, Harvard Business School

Erika James is a Visiting Associate Professor at the Harvard Business School and the Bank of America Associate Research Professor of Business Administration, at the Darden School of Business, University of Virginia.

Professor James is an expert in crisis leadership. Her work explores the competencies necessary to lead organizations throughout the life cycle of a business crisis. She examines the personal attributes of executives as well as numerous organizational factors that allow some firms to seize opportunity from crisis - including the opportunity for organizational growth, innovation, resilience and change.

Professor James’ work on crisis leadership was born out her research in workplace diversity, and in particular discrimination lawsuits. Her diversity research has explored gender and racial inequities in the workplace, the various human and social capital reasons for those inequities, and firm strategic responses to allegations of discrimination.
As a result of her combined interest in crisis management and workplace diversity, Professor James frequently works with executives to develop skills for decision making under pressure, managing the change process, fostering a diverse and inclusive environment, and building workplace trust. She has produced a number of course development materials and simulations to facilitate learning and executive development in these areas.

Professor James serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Management. She, or her research, has been featured in numerous media outlets including the Wall Street Journal, National Public Radio, Business Week, Washington Post, and Woman MBA.

PANELISTS

Donald A. Coleman
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, GlobalHue

Donald A. Coleman is an advocate of ethnic and multicultural marketing. Throughout his career, his firm has been a conduit for companies to speak to cultural markets using nontraditional messages that appeal to their values and beliefs.

After graduating from the University of Michigan, Coleman postponed the world of advertising and marketing for a career in the National Football League’s New Orleans Saints and later, the New York Jets. While sidelined by knee injuries in 1977, Coleman earned an MBA from Hofstra University and then retired from the game. The former linebacker began his communications career at Campbell-Ewald Advertising in Warren, Michigan, where he held a number of positions including senior vice president.

Upon leaving Campbell-Ewald, Coleman fulfilled his dream of starting his own minority-focused advertising agency, launching Don Coleman Advertising in 1988. In 2002, he united with Hispanic agency Montemayor y Asociados and Asian agency, Innovasia Communications to form GlobalHue.

Today, with more than 330 employees and annual billings of $720 million (2007), GlobalHue is the nation’s largest minority-owned, full-service marketing communications agency. GlobalHue has assembled a Fortune 500 client list that includes Verizon, Chrysler LLC, Wal-Mart, Bermuda Department of Tourism, US Census Bureau, US Navy, Abbott Laboratories and Subway.

Coleman is a member of several organizations’ boards, including the A.C. Nielsen Center Marketing Research Business School External Advisory Board, The Howard University John H. Johnson School of Communications Board of Visitors, Board of Trustees for the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History and the Louis Carr Internship Foundation.

The Honorable Alphonso Jackson
Director of the Center for Public Policy and Leadership, Hampton University

Secretary Alphonso Jackson is the Director of the Center for Public Policy and Leadership and also serves as the Distinguished University Professor at Hampton University.

From 2004-2008, Secretary Alphonso Jackson guided the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in its mission of providing affordable housing and promoting economic development, an assignment to which he brought more than 25 years of direct experience in both the private and public sectors.

In nominating Jackson, President George W. Bush chose a leader with a strong background in housing and community development, expertise in finance and management, and a deep commitment to improving the lives of all Americans.

Alphonso Jackson first joined the Bush Administration in June of 2001 as HUD’s Deputy Secretary and Chief Operating Officer. As Deputy Secretary, Jackson managed the day-to-day operations of the $32 billion agency and instilled a new commitment to ethics and accountability within HUD’s programs and among its workforce and grant partners.

The U.S. Senate unanimously confirmed Jackson as the nation’s 13th Secretary of HUD on March 31, 2004.

Immediately preceding his appointment at HUD, Jackson served as President of American Electric Power-TEXAS, a $13 billion utility company located in Austin, Texas.

From January 1989 until July 1996, Secretary Jackson was President and CEO of the Housing Authority of the City of Dallas, Texas, which consistently ranked as one of the best-managed large-city housing agencies in the country during his tenure. Prior to that, Secretary Jackson was Director of the Department of Public and Assisted Housing in Washington, D.C., and also served as Chairperson for the District of Columbia Redevelopment Land Agency Board.

In 1977, Jackson became the Director of Public Safety for the City of St. Louis. Jackson also served as executive director for the St. Louis Housing Authority, a director of consultant services for the certified public accounting firm of Laventhal and Horwath-St. Louis, and special assistant to the chancellor and assistant professor at the University of Missouri.

Secretary Jackson holds a bachelor’s degree in political science and a master’s degree in education administration from Truman State University. He received his law degree from Washington University School of Law.

An expert on public housing and urban issues, Jackson has been asked to serve on a number of national and state commissions, most notably the General Services Commission of the State of Texas, where he served as Chairman, the National Commission on America’s Urban Families, and the National Commission on Severely Distressed Public Housing. Secretary Jackson has also lent his expertise to numerous nonprofit and corporate boards.

Secretary Jackson and his wife Marcia are the parents of two adult daughters.
