Dear Conference Participants,

On behalf of the faculty, staff and administration of the Harvard MBA Program, we welcome you to the 26th annual African-American Student Union (AASU) Career/Alumni Conference.

The AASU conference serves a number of very important functions at HBS. It provides a forum for the exchange of knowledge and ideas that are crucial to the success of African-American business managers and entrepreneurs. The conference also sets the stage for constructive interaction among current and prospective students, alumni and representatives from sponsoring companies. This year's conference provides an opportunity to build on the many contributions of the AASU over the past quarter-century, and to focus on the challenges and opportunities to revitalize our global communities in our pursuit of collective prosperity.

It is also an important vehicle for the continued involvement of African-American alumni in the HBS community.

We appreciate and take great pride the achievements of the AASU and the leadership, organization and extraordinary efforts of our students over the years, that have made this conference one of Harvard Business School's most notable annual events.

Once again, we welcome you to the Harvard Business School campus. We're confident that the next few days will be a valuable and rewarding experience for all.

Sincerely,

Steven C. Wheelwright

Dear Friends,

I am very pleased to welcome you to the African-American Student Union's Twenty-Sixth Annual Career/Alumni Conference - The Next Step: Revitalizing Our Community. As Otu Hughes and Gregory Sims, this year's Co-Chairpersons, have noted, 1998 marks a pivotal year for the conference and an opportunity to forge an ambitious strategy for the upcoming decades.

In bringing together prospective, current, and past alumni/ae of the Harvard Business School with thought leaders in the African American community, the sessions provide a unique occasion for intellectual engagement and stimulation, as well as personal enrichment and enjoyment. Thanks for joining us to demonstrate what makes HBS such a remarkable community.

Best regards,

Kim B. Clark

Dear Friends:

The African American Student Union welcomes you to our 26th Annual Career/Alumni Conference: "The Next Step: Revitalizing Our Community". We believe this theme is particularly relevant today and the current AASU Administration has focused on this theme throughout the year. Many of our new initiatives have been centered around building the bridges between prospective students, AASU members, and our esteemed alumni group.

New Initiatives

- 1st Annual AASU / Alumni Summer Receptions in New York, Boston, and San Francisco
- Joint effort with the Administration to develop an Admissions Focus Group and Survey designed to identify action steps to increase the number of African Americans at HBS
- Foundations I and II events designed to welcome new AASU members to campus
- 1st Annual Spring/Winter Retreat designed to successfully integrate the January and September Cohorts
- The publication of the 1st joint AASU / Alumni Newsletter
- Rejuvenation of the Distinguished Speakers Series
- Creation of the Electronic Alumni Braintrust designed to strengthen the AASU/Alumni network

Traditions

- Successful 26th Consecutive Career/ Alumni Conference
- Renewed emphasis on social /civic activities to build the Community
- AASU Fall Reception for key Faculty, Administration members, and Executive Program participants
- Fall and Spring Minority Prospective Students Days
- Sponsoring the 5th Annual Study Tour to Africa

This year's conference is designed to further build momentum in our community and promises to be exciting and educational. We thank everyone for their participation in making this a successful event and wish everyone a wonderful experience.

Sincerely,

Lisa M. Skeete Tatum

Dear Friends:

On behalf of the Harvard Business School Student Association, I would like to welcome you to the 26th Annual African-American Student Union Career/Alumni Conference.

AASU is one of the most active student organizations on campus and the conference is truly one of the highlights of the year in the HBS Community. The AASU conference brings together prospective students, current students, alumni, friends, and corporate sponsors for discussion and education about issues that are relevant and important to all of us. This year's theme, The Next Step: Revitalizing Our Community, serves as a reminder that we must continue to get involved and give back to our communities.

I am confident the next few days will be educational, mentally stimulating, and rewarding for all. Once again, welcome to HBS and thanks for being a part of this year's conference.

The African-American Student Union
presents
THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL CAREER/ALUMNI CONFERENCE
"The Next Step: Revitalizing Our Community"

January 22, 1998

Dear Friends:

On behalf of the 26th Annual Career/Alumni Conference Committee and Volunteers, we would like to welcome you to Boston and to what we anticipate would be an educational, enlightening and enjoyable conference.

This year's conference, The Next Step: Revitalizing Our Community, takes over from last year's conference where we celebrated our silver anniversary. It thus signifies our entry into the next quarter century of activity. The second part of this year's theme reflects the fact that upward mobility should be shared by all within the community. Thus, as more of us push the glass ceiling even higher, we should make an effort to pave the way for even greater numbers.

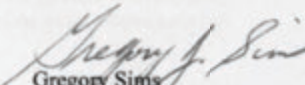

We have worked to put together an event which would be both thought-provoking and action-oriented. The interactive panels and advanced management seminars will provide us with opportunities and strategies to aid in our ascension of economic, social and political ladders. Through all this, we hope to develop a framework to help in revitalizing our global community.

As we enjoy this weekend's activities, let us also take some time out to thank those who have gone before us. Many of those individuals have been included in the program book. Let us remember that it is on their shoulders we proudly stand.

Our ability to successfully hold this annual event is due in no small way, to the part played by all the various constituents. We would therefore like to express our sincere gratitude to alumni, corporate sponsors, keynote speakers, panelists, AASU members and all conference participants and well-wishers for your undying support. With your help, we will take The Next Step in Revitalizing Our Community.

Sincerely,

Otu Hughes

Partner, McKinsey & Company

Welcome Address

Pamela Thomas-Graham is a Partner in McKinsey & Company's New York Office, where she worked extensively with media and retailing companies in the areas of strategy development and performance improvement.

Pamela is a leader of the Firm's Media and Entertainment practice, and also has extensive experience with consumer marketing and channel management issues. She is a frequent speaker on marketing topics for organizations such as the Direct Marketing Association, and has contributed a chapter to the forthcoming book The Impact of the Internet, to be published by the Columbia University Press.

Pamela has significant experience working with leading media companies and retailers on issues related to strategy, marketing, and operations. Her recent work includes developing a U.S. growth strategy for a leading European apparel company; identifying profit improvement opportunities for a consumer magazine; assessing product/market strategy for a U.K. clothing company; improving ad salesforce performance for a leading publisher; and improving supply-chain management for a men's sportswear company.

Pamela holds an A.B. magna cum laude in Economics for Harvard University, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She also holds a J.D. cum laude for Harvard Law School, where she served as an editor of the Law Review, and an M.B.A. from Harvard Business School. She is a Board Member of the New York City Opera; the American Red Cross of Greater New York; and of Girls Incorporated, the national organization focused on advocacy and direct service for adolescent girls. Pamela is also a writer; her first novel, A Darker Shade of Crimson, will be published by Simon & Schuster in April, 1998.

Dennis F. Hightower

Alumni Conference Chairperson

Dennis F. Hightower is a Professor of Management at the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration. He joined the Harvard Business School faculty in July, 1996 as a Senior Lecturer, and was appointed to his present position in July, 1997. His academic work focuses on issues of leadership and global management from the perspective of the general manager.

A retired business executive with 24 years of strategic management consulting, operational planning, strategic planning, and international general management experience, he was a senior executive with The Walt Disney Company from June 1987 to June 1996. Named President of Walt Disney Television & Telecommunications in March 1995, he was previously President of Disney Consumer Products, Europe, Middle East and Africa.

Featured in "Fortune," "Black Enterprise," and a host of other publications, Hightower's professional accomplishments have been recognized by many organizations. He is the recipient of the U.S. Department of Commerce Pioneer Award; the Harvard Business School Alumni Achievement Award and Citations for Alumni Service; an honorary doctorate degree from Howard University; the Howard University Alumni Award for Distinguished Postgraduate Achievement in Business; and the NAFEO Distinguished Alumni Citation. He is listed in "Who's Who in the World" and other reference publications. While on active military duty, he received numerous awards and decorations for meritorious achievement and valor.

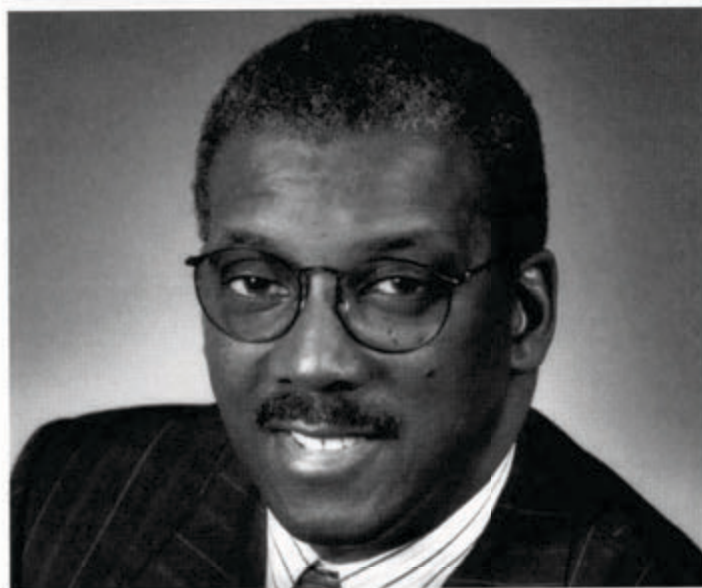

Hightower is a guest lecturer at professional management and marketing conferences throughout the world. He is a member of the board of directors of Northwest Airlines, Inc.; PanAmSat Corporation; Phillips-Van Heusen Corporation; The TJX Companies, Inc.; the Price Waterhouse Chairman's Advisory Council; Howard University Board of Trustees; and Friends of Vieilles Maisons Francaises, Inc.

He and his wife, Denia, currently divide their time between homes in Los Angeles and Paris. They have two grown children, Dennis, Jr., and Dawn H. Lucas.

Frank Savage

Chairman, Alliance Capital Management International

Keynote: Luncheon

Frank Savage is Chairman of Alliance Capital Management International, and member of the board of directors of Alliance Capital Management Corporation. Alliance Capital is a $217 billion investment management subsidiary of The Equitable Companies Incorporated. He was formerly Senior Vice President of The Equitable Life Assurance Society, and Chairman of Equitable Capital Management Corporation, a $35 billion Equitable Life investment management subsidiary, which was merged with Alliance Capital in July 1993.

Mr. Savage has a distinguished 33-year career in international banking, corporate finance, and global investment management. He spent the early part of his career with the International Division of Citicorp, serving in the Middle East and Africa. After a brief period as a principal in an international leasing company, TAW International Leasing, he spent several years as an investment officer with Equitable Life, lending directly to U.S. and foreign companies. He rose to the position of Chairman of Equitable Capital Management Corporation, a major investment management subsidiary of Equitable Life, and built the firm's global investment management business.

Mr. Savage serves on the boards of several corporations and not-for-profit organizations, including Lockheed Martin Corporation, ARCO Chemical Company, QUALCOMM Incorporated, Essence Communications, Inc., the Council on Foreign Relations, Johns Hopkins University, the New York Philharmonic and the Yale School of Management. He is also the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Howard University and a former Presidential appointee to the U.S. Synthetics Fuels Corporation.

He earned a B.A. in 1962 from Howard University, an M.A. in 1968 from The John Hopkins University Nitze School of Advanced International Studies and received an Honorary Doctorate Degree in Humane Letters from Hofstra University.

Frank Savage, a resident of Stamford, Connecticut, is married to Lolita Valderrama Savage and is the father of six children. His hobbies are sailing, skiing, and reading.

George E. Curry

Editor-In-Chief, Emerge

Opening Seminar

George E. Curry is editor-in-chief of Emerge: Black America's Newsmagazine and a regular panelist on "Lead Story," a news analysis program that airs each Sunday on BET (Black Entertainment Television).

Before taking over as editor of the nation's premier African-American newsmagazine in 1993, Curry served as New York bureau chief and as a Washington correspondent for the Chicago Tribune. Prior to joining the Tribune in 1983, Curry worked for 11 years as a reporter for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and for two years as a reporter for Sports Illustrated.

As editor of Emerge, Curry has not shirked from controversy, publishing a story about secret medical experiments conducted on African-Americans, running a cover story asking "Is Jesus Black?", printing dramatic articles such as, "Kemba's Nightmare," which was about a 24-year old woman who is serving 24 years in prison for her minor role in a drug ring, and "Rape of a Spelman Coed." In Curry's two boldest moves, he commissioned a 1993 cover that depicted U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas with an Aunt Jemima-like handkerchief on his head and in November 1996 ran an illustration of Clarence Thomas as a lawn jockey.

In 1986, Curry wrote and served as chief correspondent for the widely-praised television documentary, Assault on Affirmative Action, which was aired as part of the "Frontline" series on PBS. He was featured in a segment of "One Plus One," a national PBS documentary on mentoring that was first televised in 1989. In 1996, Curry was part of the week-long Nightline special, "America in Black and White." In addition to Nightline, he has appeared on CBS Evening News with Dan Rather, World News Tonight with Peter Jennings, The Today Show, Good Morning America, MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour, Washington Week in Review, CNN's Capital Gang Sunday and Talk Back Live, CNBC and C-SPAN.

AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Hugh B. Price

President & CEO, National Urban League

Keynote: Banquet

Hugh B. Price is the President and Chief Executive Office of the National Urban League. He was appointed on July 1, 1994. Founded in 1910, the National Urban League is the premier social service and civil rights organization in America. The League is a nonprofit, nonpartisan community-based organization headquartered in New York City with 115 affiliates in 34 states and the District of Columbia. The mission of the National Urban League is to assist African Americans in the achievement of social and economic equality. The League implements its mission through advocacy, bridge building between the races, program services and research.

Mr. Price served from 1978 to 1982 as a member of the Editorial Board of The New York Times. There he wrote editorials on a broad range of public policy issues including public education, urban affairs, manpower, welfare, criminal justice and telecommunications. Prior to the Times, he held the position of human resources administrator for the City of

New Haven. He served as a member of the mayor's Cabinet and supervised the City's Head Start program and services for youth and senior citizens.

Mr. Price served for six years as senior vice president of WNET/Thirteen, the public television station in New York City. He initially supervised all local broadcast functions for the station and assumed direction in 1984 of WNET's national production center. Series developed or produced for the Public Broadcasting Service during his tenure include Nature, Great Performance, The Mind, American Masters, Art of the Western World and Childhood.

His articles have appeared in numerous publications, including The New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Chronicle, Phi Delta Kappan, Review of Black Political Economy and Education Week. He also distributes a weekly radio commentary and writes a weekly column entitled "To Be Equal" for African-American newspapers across the country.

Mr. Price currently serves on the board of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Bell Atlantic, Sears Roebuck & Company, Educational Testing Service, Urban Institute and the Committee for Economic Development. He was appointed by President Clinton to serve on the National Skills Standards Board.

Approximately one year ago, the country was stunned as audio tapes were released which featured high level corporate executives from Texaco using derogatory remarks towards African-Americans. This revelation sparked a wave of activities which included lawsuits from employees, boycotts from civil and human rights groups, vigorous debates on the nation's television and radio waves as well as a rarely granted interview and speech from President Bill Clinton on the topic of affirmative action. Many at the time questioned what these developments meant in regards to the state of race relations in America. Others wondered if systematic plans had been enacted to purposefully deny women and minority employees access to the upper echelons of corporate management.

served as New York bureau chief and as a Washington correspondent for the Chicago Tribune. Prior to joining the Tribune in 1983, Curry worked for 11 years as a reporter for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and for two years as a reporter for Sports Illustrated.

As editor of Emerge, Curry has not shirked from controversy, publishing a story about secret medical experiments conducted on African-Americans, running a cover story asking "Is Jesus Black?", printing dramatic articles such as, "Kemba's Nightmare," which was about a 24-year old woman who is serving 24 years in prison for her minor role in a drug ring, and "Rape of a Spelman Coed." In Curry's two boldest moves, he commissioned a 1993 cover that depicted U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas with an Aunt Jemima-like handkerchief on his head and in November 1996 ran an illustration of Clarence Thomas as a lawn jockey.

In 1986, Curry wrote and served as chief correspondent for the widely-praised television documentary, Assault on Affirmative Action, which was aired as part of the "Frontline" series on PBS. He was featured in a segment of "One Plus One," a national PBS documentary on mentoring that was first televised in 1989. In 1996, Curry was part of the week-long Nightline special, "America in Black and White." In addition to Nightline, he has appeared on CBS Evening News with Dan Rather, World News Tonight with Peter Jennings, The Today Show, Good Morning America, MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour, Washington Week in Review, CNN's Capital Gang Sunday and Talk Back Live, CNBC and C-SPAN.

Michael E. Porter

Professor, Harvard Business School

Michael E. Porter is the C. Roland Christensen Professor of Business Administration at the Harvard Business School and a leading authority on competitive strategy and international competitiveness. He received a B.S.E. with high honors in aerospace and mechanical engineering from Princeton University in 1969, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Tau Beta Pi. He also received an M.B.A. with high distinction in 1971 from the Harvard Business School, where he was a George F. Baker Scholar, and a Ph.D. in Business Economics from Harvard University in 1973.

Professor Porter joined the Harvard Business School faculty in 1973 and became one of the youngest tenured professors in the School's history. His ideas have now become the foundation for one of the required courses at the School. Among Harvard Business School's most popular teachers, Professor Porter teaches strategy and created and leads a workshop at the School for newly appointed chief executive officers of billion dollar corporations. He also speaks widely on competitive strategy and international competitiveness to business and government audiences throughout the world.

Professor Porter also serves as an advisor to other nations and regions. He has led major studies of the economy for the governments of such countries as India, New Zealand, Canada, and Portugal, and his ideas have inspired national competitiveness initiatives in more than a dozen other countries as well as in subnational regions such as Catalonia, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. Professor Porter is currently working with the heads of state of the seven Central American countries to develop an economic strategy for that region. Recently, he has undertaken a project bringing together national teams from Egypt, Israel, Jordan, and Palestine to advance the competitive potential of the Middle East.

The recent boom in the internet and computing has created tremendous opportunity for many. The internet is being used to facilitate the information flow between parties with common goals and aspirations through various types of online communities. The creation and administration of these communities has been the focus of many recent startup companies (CitySearch, Firefly, PlanetAll, etc.). The panel will focus on the small businesses that provide information services that cater to the African-American community. Panelist will discuss the unique opportunities and challenges that the information revolution has created for the African-American community.

Nick Gleason

Co-Founder and President, CitySoft

Nick Gleason (HBS '97) is co-founder and President of CitySoft (www.citysoft.com), a high tech start-up company that specializes in World Wide Web development and in system networking. CitySoft hires pre-trained, talented young adults from lower income urban neighborhoods in order to help create high wage technology jobs in technologically isolated communities. CitySoft was started at HBS as a project for Professor Marco Iansiti's class, Managing Product Development. CitySoft has been featured in a variety of print and online media and has been the subject of one HBS case (so far).

Before attending HBS, Nick was a successful business entrepreneur in the San Francisco Bay Area. Nick also has an extensive background in urban development and has worked with a variety of non-profits, foundations and government agencies in Oakland, San Francisco, Newark and Boston. Nick earned his undergraduate degree from Stanford where he majored in Political Science (with Honors) and English.

Omar Wasow

Founder and President, New York Online

Omar Wasow, 27, is the founder and president of New York Online, a leading developer of online ventures. Profiled in the New York Times, Fortune, MTV, The MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour and Wired, Wasow has been tagged by Newsweek Magazine's article "50 for the Future" as one of the most influential people to watch in cyberspace. New York Online has worked closely with clients, ranging from Fortune 500 giants to modest non-profits, assisting them in using the Internet to achieve long term strategic business goals. Current and former clients include The College Board, Consumer Reports, The Martinique Promotion Bureau, The New Yorker, Pfizer and Samsung.

Before founding New York Online, Wasow completed an individually designed major in Race and Ethnic Relations at Stanford University. Following school he worked on the Advance Team of Freedom Summer '92 coordinating a twenty-two city cross-country voter registration drive. Later he became the Assistant Director of Strictly Business, a non-profit job training program that taught legal entrepreneurship to ex-drug dealers.

Keith T. Clinkscales

President & CEO, VIBE

Keith T. Clinkscales, President and CEO of VIBE, has been the guiding force behind the urban music magazine since its inception in September 1993. The magazine, a joint venture between Quincy Jones-David Salzman Entertainment and Time Inc. Ventures, was sold to VIBE Ventures, a partnership lead by Jones and Robert L. Miller of Miller Publishing Group. Clinkscales and John Rollins, VIBE Publisher, round out the ownership group. VIBE is the first magazine of its kind to focus on the many facets of urban music and the multi-culture generation of trendsetters who inspire it.

Clinkscales joined VIBE as Chief Operating Officer. He was promoted to President and Chief Executive Officer in February 1994. Under his leadership, the magazine has experienced tremendous growth. VIBE's initial circulation base started at 100,000 in 1993, increasing to its present circulation of 600,000. His business acumen has allowed VIBE to grow beyond the magazine into a franchise that recently includes "VIBE," a one-hour late-night syndicated entertainment/talk series, hosted by actor-comedian, Sinbad. Clinkscales is the Executive in Charge of Production for the show.

Prior to embarking on a career in the media, Clinkscales graduated with an M.B.A. from Harvard Business School and accepted a position with Chemical Bank as a Credit Analyst. He was quickly promoted to Account Officer, wherein he later decided to pursue an entrepreneurial opportunity in publishing.

New and developing companies are faced with the uncertain and difficult process of obtaining capital to build and grow their businesses. Venture capital and private equity markets are often the most viable funding alternative for these companies. Venture capital and private investors identify and back superior management teams, supporting their talent and vision with capital and experience. Why is this industry so attractive? What are the skills necessary to be successful in this industry? Where is this industry going? A power-packed panel of senior African-American professionals from the venture capital and private equity communities will address these questions as well as discuss their personal experiences, successes, and challenges.

The Future Belongs To Those Who Earn It.

Take a glimpse at the future of the investment business.

Where client needs are always placed first. Where non-traditional thinking is encouraged and prized. Where investors, individual and institutional alike, can profit from a dedication to understanding their financial needs and creatively developing the means to help them achieve their goals.

The Pursuit Of Client Value

Where relationships between investment banking, trading, research and brokerage forge a remarkable integration of capabilities. All in the pursuit of value for our clients. Take a glimpse at the future of the investment business: today's Salomon Smith Barney.

Attracting The Best And The Brightest

We have long put a premium on hiring and retaining the most talented people. And today, our vision continues to attract some of the most innovative financial minds.

These professionals have dedicated themselves to serving our clients based upon our beliefs of integrity and hard work.

A Work Ethic That Raises The Bar

To our way of thinking, the future of the investment business builds on the very work ethic that has brought Salomon Smith Barney to this exciting juncture.

It means starting earlier. Thinking smarter. Acting faster.

It means raising the bar of service expectations to help our clients prosper.

And so a powerful idea is taking hold in the financial community: the belief that one investment firm will set the pace for the future.

Not surprisingly, its name is Salomon Smith Barney.

Eighty percent of the National Basketball Association's players are black, sixty-seven percent of the National Football League's players are black, and seventeen percent of Major League Baseball's players are black. However, blacks have historically been denied access to decision-making posts and ownership groups in the professional sports arena. In a period of dynamic growth and changing economics for professional sports, the complexion of its management is changing as well.

of the City of New York. He serves on the Board of Trustees of Citizens Budget Commission of the City of New York and previously served on the Board of Directors of the International Trademark Association.

Jimmie Lee Solomon

Executive Director, Minor League Baseball

In July, 1991, Jimmie Lee Solomon was appointed Executive Director of Minor League Operations by then Commissioner Fay Vincent. Today, he is considered one of the most powerful and influential men in the world of sports as he governs the relationship between Major League Baseball and it's Minor League System.

After graduating from Harvard Law School in 1981, he joined Baker & Hostetler, one of the top corporate law firms in the country, where he eventually became partner. During his ten years at Baker & Hostetler, he advised the National Football League Management Council and handled National Football League arbitration hearings. His areas of expertise run the gamut of the business of sports: contract negotiations, corporate and business legal matters, governmental and legislative strategic planning and lobbying. While at Baker & Hostetler, he also represented a number of professional football and basketball players.

Overseeing the entire Minor league operations of Major League Baseball consisting of 17 leagues, with 175 member clubs, entail far more than evaluating and structuring a competitive balance for player talent. It also requires the administration of facility and playing field renovations and upgrades; the implementation of financial reporting and ratio testing programs; the governing of all transfers of ownership; the handling of all matters involving the Major and Minor League officials in the establishment of policies and procedures to enhance the working relationship between their respective clubs. A Minor League team cannot be bought, sold or moved from one city to another without the input or approval of Mr. Solomon. Minor League baseball has truly flourished under his direction. Since 1991, 54 new facilities have been built and over $600 million has been spent to refurbish the environment for Minor League teams across the country.

In a billion dollar industry where time is money and decisions must be made promptly and accurately to protect the interests and investments of both the Major and Minor League owners, Mr. Jimmie Lee Solomon is a vital decision maker.

Cathy Hampton

Jonathan Mariner

Vice President of Finance and Administration, Florida Marlins

Mr. Mariner currently serves as Vice President of Finance and Administration for the Florida Marlins Baseball Club. In his capacity as Chief Financial Officer for the Marlins, he is responsible for directing all day-to-day financial and administrative operations for this professional sports franchise, including the financial reporting, budgets, payroll and treasury functions. He also responsible for the administration of all human resources, office, MIS and risk functions for the Marlins.

Eighteen months ago, Mr. Mariner also assumed the role of Chief Financial Officer for Pro Player Stadium, the 70,000 seat, 216-suite sports complex which serves as home for both the Florida Marlins and Miami Dolphins.

Prior to joining the Marlins, Mr. Mariner served as Vice President, Finance and Administration for the Greater Miami Convention & Visitors Bureau, the private non-profit entity exclusively responsible for tourism promotion and development for Dade County, Florida. His primary focus involved implementing new computerized accounting controls and budgeting systems, resulting in significant costs saving and a complete financial turn-around from a debt-laden, cash poor operation to one with seven-figure surplus cash balances.

Mr. Mariner graduated from the University of Virginia in 1976 with a B.S. degree in Accounting and a minor in Management Information Systems and is a Certified Public Accountant (CPA). He received his MBA degree from Harvard Business School.

John T. Rose II

Player Relations and Administration, NBA

John Rose, a Harvard Law School graduate, has served as a lawyer and executive in the entertainment and sports industries, where he has worked on a variety of cutting edge projects.

In 1994, John was promoted to Senior Vice President, Player Relations and Administration of the National Basketball

Association with responsibility for, among other things, coordinating the many contractual and commercial relationships with current and former players, coaches and talent.

Previously John served as Vice President and General Counsel of NBA Properties. In this position, John guided the legal affairs of NBA Properties as it nearly quadrupled its licensing business (to $1.8 billion annually), expanded its marketing and sponsor business, developed its program production business (now including weekly network television and cable programs), broadened its base of marketable properties, implemented a worldwide trademark registration program and extended its special event and promotion business into international markets.

Before joining NBA Properties in 1989, John was Vice President, Law, Staff at the National Broadcasting Company. There he worked on a variety of matters including NBC's acquisition of the broadcast rights to the 1980 a 1988 Summer Olympics, the development of NBC's innovative K-band satellite delivery system and a number of new business initiatives.

He is an active member of a number of professional and business organizations including the Association of the Bar

The collapse of apartheid and the gradual wave of political and economic reform have turned on the lights in the business landscape of what is considered the Dark Continent. Private Equity investors, entrepreneurs and large corporations are springing up all over in fields ranging from manufacturing, mining, retail, export, telecommunications and the internet, making unprecedented returns. The risks are several, the returns are enormous, the reforms have been slow but steady, however nagging questions still remain in a lot of people's mind: How do you deal with government's involvement in enterprise? How do you tap into the large low wage labor force? How do you deal with lack of infrastructure and the absence of a solid capital market? How do you deal with inflation and exchange rate instability in the region? How do you deal with ethnic and geo-political conflicts? How do you insure your capital in a region where the rule of law is perceived as non-existent? This panel promises to offer meaningful and relevant insights to questions about doing business in Africa.

Without question entrepreneurship will be a vital component in the rebuilding of our communities. African-American women are by no means new-comers to the arena of building businesses. This panel will focus on African-American women who are already a major force on the entrepreneurial front. Hear from a broad range of distinguished women—from seasoned entrepreneurs who have been successful for decades, to brave pioneers who are just starting out new ventures. Discussion will focus on the complexities involved in the decision to become an entrepreneur, and the numerous challenges that entrepreneurs face. In addition, it will cover the unique issues that Black women face in starting, building and maintaining an entrepreneurial venture.

Selma Jackson

Co-Owner, 4W Circle of Art & Enterprise

Selma Jackson, the middle child of five daughters born to James and Anna McNeely, grew up in the South Bronx when it was a cluster of neighborhoods — just like Brooklyn is now! Educated in the public schools of New York City and a graduate of Hunter College, Ms. Jackson received a B.A. in chemistry and a M.S. in Environmental Health Services.

Becoming an entrepreneur grew out of seeing her parents in business. Her mother catered for friends and family and her father quit his job of sixteen years as a New York City bus driver to open a washing machine/refrigerator repair service. At the age of thirteen, Ms. Jackson was secretary and bookkeeper for her father. "By the time I was fifteen years old, I decided that when I reached the age of forty, I would be in business for myself...just like my dad!"

Although it took Ms. Jackson a little longer than planned, she is grateful for the training ground provided by her fifteen years work experience at Chemical Bank, including her years as branch manager. Some of the planning and design of 4W Circle of Art & Enterprise are an outgrowth of her banking expertise.

4W Circle of Art & Enterprise, now in its sixth year, is a cooperative collective dedicated to providing an opportunity for home based businesses to try retail with minimal risk and gain strength to open their own establishment. 4W Circle of Art and Enterprise has four "children" in the universe.

Lillian Lincoln

President & CEO, Centennial One, Inc.

Lillian Lincoln is President & CEO of Centennial One, Inc., located in Landover, Maryland. COI provides a range of services to building owners and managers ranging from full janitorial services and the distribution of janitorial supplies and equipment, to total care and service of carpets, carpet

The Fred Woodard Trio

"I just want to transmit a positive feeling to my audience."

That's what Fred Woodard's music does. The eclectic guitarist leads the Boston-based The Fred Woodard Trio. The band's music is Jazz spiced with sounds of R&B. The Fred Woodard Trio smoothly spurs finger popping and head swaying. The band then gently floats you into straight ahead Jazz the likes of which has rarely been played by a guitarist of Woodard's generation.

Fred Woodard has performed internationally with artists such as Sam & Dave, The Drifters, The Marvelettes, Albert Griffiths, Dee Dee Sharp and Calypso Rose. On the local circuit Fred has performed with such names as Danny Tucker, Weeping Willie and The All-Star Blues Band. Woodard has treated New England audiences to his intimate style of Jazz in popular night spots such as Davio's, Connolly's, The Willow and Water Works. He has also added his explosive sounds to special events such as the WGBH Boston Tea Party, Coalition of 100 Black Women's "Nubian Night" festivities and to the National Association of Black Journalists "Annual Night of Recognition, the ABCD 21st Annual Community Awards Dinner, the Zumix Concert Series and special events held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Franklin Institute of Boston and The Amana Iowa City Jazz Festival."

Educated at Berklee College of Music, Woodard shares the love of his craft as music teacher in Boston-area schools. He says, "It gives me an opportunity to re-think my approach to my instrument. I also get to reach people who wouldn't have a chance to otherwise learn an instrument."

Coordinator: Denmark West, MBA 1998

AASU Church Service: Karl Reid

Executive Director of Special Programs, MIT School of Engineering Minister, Deacon, Men's Ministry Coordinator, New Covenant Christian Center, Karl Reid joined MIT in January 1998 as the Executive Director of Special Programs for the School of Engineering. In this role, he manages the Engineering Internship Program for undergraduates, and the Minority Introduction to Engineering, Entrepreneurship and Science (MITE2S). MITE2S is an intensive 6-week academic program that introduces qualified 11th grade students nationwide to engineering, science, and entrepreneurial disciplines.

Previously, Karl spent 12 years in the software industry in product management, product marketing, sales, and consulting services roles, including 6 years at IBM. Karl graduated from MIT with bachelors and masters degrees in Materials Science and Engineering in 1984 and '85 respectively. While at MIT, Karl made Jesus Christ the Lord of his life. After this important decision, Karl was instrumental in resurrecting the Black Christian Fellowship, and was involved in the MIT Gospel Choir and the Concerts of Prayer with other Christian groups on campus. In addition, he served as national chairperson of the National Society of Black Engineers from 1984 to 1985.

As a member of New Covenant Christian Center of Boston, Massachusetts for the past 12 years, Karl serves as a minister, men's ministry coordinator, and head deacon. He and his wife founded and headed the Young Adults Ministry for 5 years. Karl and Andrea, his wife of 10 years, have two young children.

"Searching For The Best? So Are We..."

That's what our President, Charlie Baillie, says, when asked about opportunities for bright business graduates at Toronto Dominion. And what he means is that by recruiting and developing people with initiative, TD has earned a place in the forefront of the North American financial industry—a leading corporate and investment bank.

With enormous strength in both financial and human capital, we have what it takes to pursue the opportunities of the 21st century.

TD
SECURITIES

What we need are more of the right kind of people—people who thrive on change—because our jobs are consistently changing, as TD changes in response to our clients and the marketplace...people who have a thirst for learning... people who will build our business... people who will create the future. That's what we mean by the best.

It's an ideal environment for an achievement-oriented MBA or undergraduate. If you are searching for the best, and you would like to hear more about TDUSA, we'd like to hear from you.

Our Deepest Gratitude

The Conference Committee would like to express its gratitude to all those who have contributed in making this event a success. Thank you to the members of the African American Student Union for your dedication, input and time. Thank you to the faculty and staff who were instrumental in this effort. You put in so much effort each year that we begin to think it is your duty. Thank you all very much for giving of yourselves.

Thank you very much to Servigraphics for all the printing needs of this conference, and to the Boston Park Plaza Hotel for your input, help and facilities.

Our deepest gratitude, however, goes to our distinguished speakers, panelists, and you, our honored guests and conference participants. It is for you that we do this every year.

Thank you.
